County Politics Race Into Home Stretch

Tuesday is the day of decision for the many first time office-seekers in the Coffee County commissioners' races. Without exception, this group of candidates is probably the hardest working, handsomest bunch that ever sought elective jobs in Coffee County. There's no way of telling how many doors they have knocked on, how many carous they have handed out, or how much barbecue they have eaten. With it all, there has been an absolute minimum of mud slinging.

While only four out of the field of 15 can go into office, all of them should be congratulated for qualifying and running for commissioner. Because so many good candidates are seeking public positions, the voters have an exceptionally able group from which to pick their candidate.

Two years ago we predicted fairly accurately how the race for sheriff, collector and representative would turn out. This year no candidate seems to have a clear cut lead over his opponents so we are not going to attempt to forecast results. Instead, in the races where we have made up our mind how we are going to vote, we are going to endorse that individual.

In District No. 1 where five men are in the field, we still don't know for whom we are going to vote. Leon Smart, Joe Moore, Rex Lowery, Gene Brown and O. C. McCollough all have worked hard. Each has his strength. It's a hard choice to make.

Claude Tindol in District No. 2 already has been endorsed by us. During the campaign we have been impressed by his quiet and unassuming manner and have been pleased at the strong support he has attracted from his home community as well as around New Brockton and Enterprise. He gained strength as the race progressed.

Around home we are going to stick with Flournoy Whitman as commissioner in District No. 3. As the main job of a commissioner is to build roads, we think voters would have to go a long way to find Mr. Whitman's equal in this department. A list of the roads he blacktopped since being in office includes many of importance to the entire county. They are the Kinston road, Coffee County fish pond, River Road to New Hope and Batton's Cross Roads by Leverett, Ino and Perry's Store.

In addition, Mr. Whitman has shown himself to be progressive in other fields of county government by supporting the new wearers building project and helping the cities of Enterprise and Elba with their airport construction. We like the conscientious attention he has shown to his job.

The situation in District No. 4 (Enterprise) became muddled last week when Ollie Helms went to the hospital. By hard campaigning and attending political rallies, Mr. Helms had picked up a good edge over Buster Bowden who had failed to show up at any of the political rallies we attended (Pine Level, Zion Chapel and Basin). For his campaigning Mr. Bowden has relied on his followers to pass the word along that he is "strong in his district" and is "all right." His personal appearances have been held to a minimum.

Mrs. Everett Fuller, niece of Mr. Helms, stated Monday that her uncle had suffered a coronary occlusion, probably about a week before he went to the hospital. He is now resting easily, she reported, and after a period of recuperation expects to be able to fulfill all the duties of the office he seeks.

J. P. "Pierce" McWaters of Goodman community was at all the rallies but had the disadvantage of not being as well known at the start as Mr. Helms. As a man who had taken part in three campaigns, Mr. Helms had developed an easy way of meeting folks and talking to them. McWaters, however, has a good reputation for honesty and good management of his holdings among long time acquaintances.

But since we can't vote for both men, we are going to cast our ballot for Ollie Helms because he has served two terms as commissioner and is familiar with general construction work.

That about takes care of the commissioners' races in the first primary. If there were no runoff in every district, we'd be surprised.

We realize this editorial breaks down a long standing feeling that most folks feel they can't afford to mix in politics because it might hurt their business or make some one angry. However, we say what we think. Whether you agree or disagree with us is your business. We will try to convince you of the soundness of our position. If you can't see it that way, it doesn't mean we are enemies. It simply means we don't agree.

Solve a Crime BY A. C. GORDON

Your dreams of beginning your long-awaited vacation on this bright and sunny Monday morning are shattered when you receive a telephone call informing you of a robbery and murder.

Upon your arrival at the boarding house scene of the tragedy, Mrs. Millie Lester, the landlady, conducts you to the room of the old bachelor, Herman Wilkes. His lifeless body lies face down on the floor, one side of his skull crushed in.

"His money is all gone, too," Mrs. Lester tells you. "He always kept at least $300 here. When he didn't come down for breakfast, I came up to his room and found him like this! You can imagine the excitement among my other boarders when I told them!"

Then you say, "Of course, since all four of you have sums of money in your rooms which closely match the amount taken from Herman Wilkes' room, and since all four of you were here at the time the murder took place, you are all possible suspects. But there's just one of you I'm taking with me now for further questioning."

Who is your prime suspect and why?

SOLUTION—Tom Milton. He claimed to have drawn the money out of the bank yesterday. But this is Monday. Banks are not open for business on Sundays!

"I'm Margaret Conklin," says a middle-aged woman. "That's the money I've managed to save from my earnings as a waitress. It's for a vacation. I'm certainly not one to go around killing old men!"

"I'll admit the money you found in my room isn't mine," stated a fat, red-faced man. "Tom Milton, I owe that money to Fred Howie. I lost that much in his gambling room last week and gave him a note. I drew the money out of a bank yesterday and was going to take it to him today."

"And now I suppose it's my turn," speaks up Mrs. Lester, the landlady. "The money you found in my room just happens to be what I've saved from rents collected for the last few months. I suppose I should have taken it to a bank long before this!"

You turn these stories over in your mind for a few minutes. Then you say, "Of course, since all four of you have sums of money in your rooms which closely match the amount taken from Herman Wilkes' room, and since all four of you were here at the time the murder took place, you are all possible suspects. Pig's Jowl Tells All

Alabama hog producers need to become more jowl-conscious. So says G. B. Phillips of the API Extension Service. Phillips, who is Extension animal industry specialist, explains his statement by pointing out that the look of the jowl is a sure clue to whether a market hog is meaty or lard. A hog with a heavy, triple-chinned, flat jowl is sure to be lard, with excessive fat. But if a top hog has a smooth, clean, firm jowl, he's likely to be carrying meaty cuts that consumers want.

Newcastle Disease Is Worse Than Appears

AUBURN—Newcastle disease, one of the ailments that bothers poultrymen in Alabama, has a terrible wallop. In fact, according to API Extension Poultry Specialist Hoyt M. Warren, Newcastle is far worse than many producers realize. Speaking in Auburn this week, Warren cited reports which reveal that Newcastle not only costs poultrymen money in vaccination expenses and in losses during disease outbreaks, but it also causes loss of egg quality.

Fine Cotton Classing Offered This Year

AUBURN—Again this year, Alabama cotton growers who are organized in community or county improvement associations will be able to get free classing and market news service.

Provided by the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, this benefit enables farmers to get their cotton classed soon after it has been ginned. This, a cotton improvement club member knows the exact grade and staple of his cotton and can bargain for the best market price offered for that class.

Expanding now free classing helps cotton growers in this state. API Extension Cotton Specialist Jasper Jernigan this week urged club officials to make applications for the AMS service. He said instructions and application forms will be available at county agents' offices around May 1. Requests must be in by Aug. 1 in Alabama.

Cotton classed under this service here last year totaled 489,000 bales—about 67 percent of the state crop. Around 82 percent of the total U. S. crop was classed by AMS.

lost quality faster than eggs from the control group.

Best safeguard against such losses in a commercial egg flock is the traditional "quarantine" of new flocks. Warren pointed out, a good vaccination program normally will protect a flock from outbreak of Newcastle disease.

Pine Beetle Favors Warm, Dry Weather

AUBURN—Alabama pines are big, strong, proud plants. But even the mightiest of them must bow to the tiny southern pine beetle when that insect brings hundreds of its relatives to feed and rear their young on the tree's bark and sap.

An attack by the southern pine beetle, usually coming in warm, dry weather, can destroy a whole plot of mature, healthy pines. However, beetles in one readily attack trees that are scattered, sickly, or otherwise weak, and thus it is trees of this type that should be watched most closely for signs of damage.

This insect should be suspected when pines become sickly looking, with pale green or brown tops, especially during beetle weather. Trees in which beetles are breeding may show pitch drops or tube formations on the outside of the bark. Inside, the bark will be crisscrossed by a network of tunnels, some with hundreds of tiny eggs in them. Often an infested pine will be surrounded by bark that woodpeckers have shelled off in digging for the insects. If a tree has reddish brown needles and its bark is peppered with shot-like holes, the beetles have left already and the tree is dead.

I. R. Martin, API Extension agent, says the following steps are necessary to successfully ward off serious beetle damage to stands of pines: Cut and peel all infested pines. The bark must be turned up to the hot sun, to kill the insects. If the bark won't peel off easily, the log may be sprayed with orthodichlorobenzene or BHC. County agents have directions for treating damaged trees.

Martin advises that damaged stands be checked every two weeks during hot, dry weather for signs of new attack.

Hatchery Production

60% Above March '55

During the month of March, Alabama commercial hatcheries produced 6,970,000 chicks which includes 5,971,000 broiler chicks. This total hatch is 2,619,000 (60 percent) above the March 1955 production of 4,351,000 chicks and compares with 3,968,000, the 5-year (1950-54) average. Output of chicks for January through March totaled 17,250,000 compared with 11,238,000 for the same three months of 1955. Prices paid to commercial hatcheries in Alabama as of March 15 for straight-run heavy and heavy cross breeds, averaged $15.00 per hundred; for light breeds the average was $13.50. Prices paid for hatchings averaged 84 cents.

Total March egg production for Alabama is estimated at 81 million eggs—5 percent above last year in March. The rate of egg production in March was 20 per layer, compared with 18.74 last year. The estimated number of layers on Alabama farms during the month was 40,000—2 percent above the 39,000 of March 1955. Prices received by Alabama farmers for eggs in mid-March averaged 40.5 cents compared with 47.6 on February 15 and 40.1 in mid-March last year.

New Forest Products Enhance Trees' Value

Forest products research laboratories are turning out a veritable stream of new products and processes that hold much promise for the future of the timber industry here and in other states. According to APJ Extension Forest Products Specialist Wendell Vickery, one of the latest discoveries is a fiberboard that filters out harmful chemicals while allowing passage of pure air and even offers some protection against radioactivity.

VOTE FOR OLLIE HELMS

CANDIDATE FOR

Coffee County Commissioner

Subject to the Democratic Primaries May 1 & 29, 1956

DISTRICT No. 4

I wish to take this means of telling the voters of Coffee County that the coronary occlusion which I suffered two weeks ago is "on the mend" and after a period of recuperation will be able to resume my normal routine. Doctors have assured me I will be able to perform the duties required of a commissioner. I regret that I was confined to the hospital during a critical period of the campaign and was unable to follow through on my plans to personally contact as many voters as possible.

I am still in the race and am qualified physically and through experience to hold this important post. If elected commissioner from District No. 4, I will appreciate the honor more than ever and will do everything in my power to give this county the best roads in the state as well as a progressive administration in other fields.

MEET THE NEW BOSS

in the Performance Department!

Come in and Drive
the Surprise Car of the Year!

The word's getting around fast—the big, handsome husky you see here is the big surprise that caught the industry a year or so off balanced. But it didn't come as any surprise to Pontiac engineers that they had the year's performance sensation.

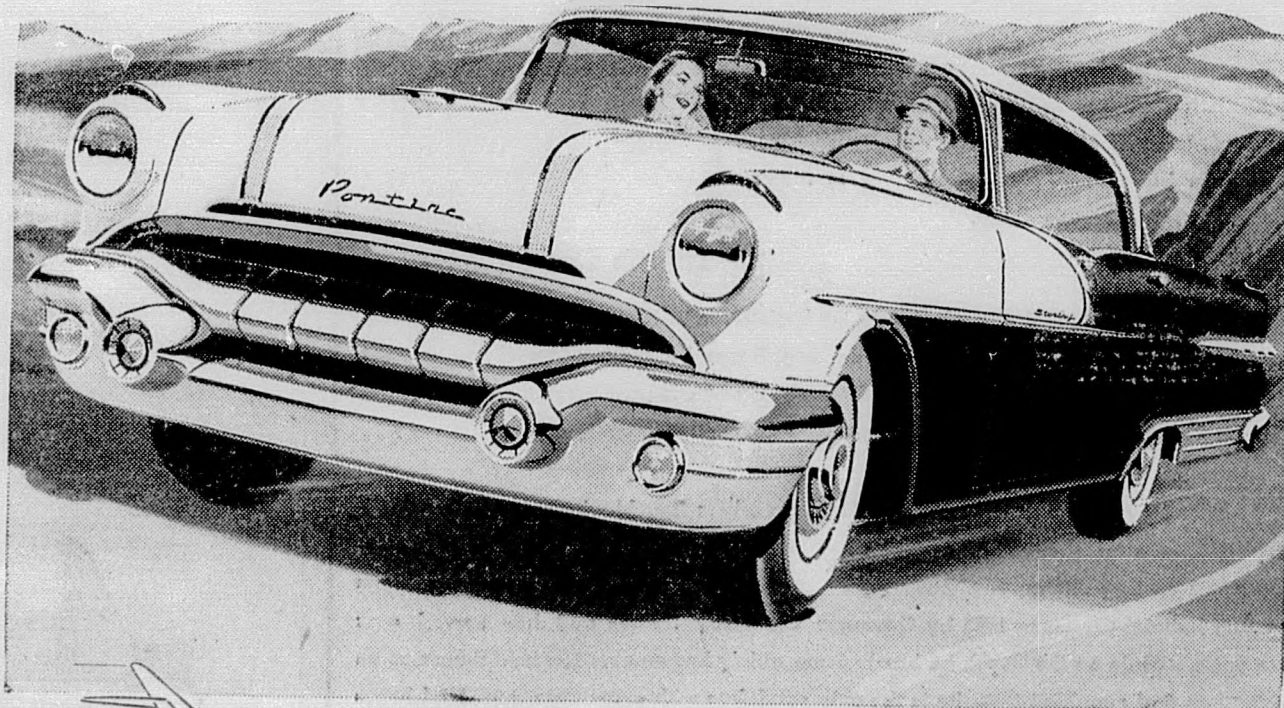

They knew all along that it would be, because they started from scratch and designed the most modern and efficient high-compression, high-torque V-8 engine in America!

Then they tailored an all-new Strato-Flight Hydra-Matic* especially for Pontiac's high-stepping Strato-Streak power plant—and for nothing else! The blazing action of 227 horses is yours in a flash with the positive, no-lag action of gears—plus an amazing liquid coupling for a smooth, uninterrupted flow of power to the wheels.

Bring yourself up to date—come in and pilot the surprise car of the year—you'll soon see what the talk's all about!

And don't be afraid to ask about price, for that's another pleasant surprise—the one that will let you boss the best on the road for a great deal less than you probably think! *An extra-cost option.

The car says GO and the price won't stop you!
